Humblesmith: THE VOLCANO

Humblesmith a.k.a The African Singercologist is a proud singer/songwriter and performer - proud of his art. He basks in the joy it brings to his growing list of listeners. Also proud of the blood, sweat, tears and fears that has gone into reaching this milestone.

Born on the 14th of May, 1991 in Abakaliki (Ebony State, Nigeria), Ekenedirichukwu Ijembia (real name) is the fifth of eight children of a stationery-dealer father and a teacher mother. At the very tender age of 6, Ekene discovered his penchant for entertainment. He led a group of his mates to perform at various social and church events. They were known then as American Boys (after the then-popular song they always used for their dance act). Growing up was tough, Ekene recalled. His elder siblings had to put in a lot of efforts through street-hawking to augment the meagre incomes of their parents. He had hardly shed his milk-teeth when he joined them with his own tray of snacks. Thus, for many, he is known as the 'moi-moi seller'.

Ekene's performances continued to attract attention. On several occasions, while on a hawking mission, he would hide his snacks and sneak into shows to perform. Clearly, nothing was going to stand in his way! Many years later, as a teenager, he went to Asaba, a town that was fast becoming synonymous with Nollywood. Ekene longed for the limelight to showcase his many talents. He was featured in some minor roles in a handful of movies, but the momentum was soon lost and he returned to Abakaliki.

On his return to the laid-back town, he realised that he was completely cut off from entertainment opportunities. Abakaliki was better known for its huge rice mill. So, back to Asaba he went. This time, he was more determined to succeed. He combed the town for shows and scouted for movie roles with fervour. At a show, he approached the promoter with his demo cd and even begged to perform. After a long delay, the DJ gave him a two-minute spot. Ekene seized his 120 seconds and gave a performance of his life. He dazzled the audience with his music and vibrant stage performance. The show promoter was amazed and took note. So did some others, who applauded the electric stage presence he exhibited.

Unknown to them, Ekene was following in the footsteps of his idol, Bright Chimezie, who lit up events across Nigeria and beyond with his powerful lyrics and energetic dance-steps. In 2013, at the Gordon's Live In Asaba show, Humblesmith met Bob Kelly Ovie Williams, the CEO of N-tyze Entertainment Limited, who was handling the event, and that meeting turned out to be fortuitous for the wannabe singer. Bob Kelly was searching for young and passionate performers. Humblesmith's vibrant dance steps and stage presence stole the show, making a huge impression on the young CEO. So, by the time they met again at the 2013 edition of Felabration, it was inevitable they would team up. The next step is promotion and honing the young act to match and even surpass the best in the industry. N-tyze entertainment is poised to take the young act as far as possible, in a no-holds-barred campaign that promises to enrich the industry, add flavour to events and bring joy to listeners of all age brackets and inclinations.

For all his boisterousness on stage, the Golden Prince Of Africa, as he also likes to be called, is focused on reaching the top and affecting lives, especially the young and aspiring musicians. The street hawker will no longer parade the streets of Abakaliki selling snacks. He now peddles an explosive, unique, groovy and truly African sound that will be heard all around the world. And that is his niche, where he will be untouchable.

Bob the Dogged

Bob Kelly Ovie Williams ventured into entertainment early, learned the ropes faster than most and launched into the deep fearlessly, knocking down tough doors, doggedly blistering his way to success and fame.

The Isoko-born young CEO of N-Tyze Entertainment was born in Ajegunle, a pulsating hub known for producing some of Africa's greatest entertainers and raised in Oleh (in the heart of the Niger Delta). Bob Kelly Ovie Williams knew early where he wanted to be: in the forefront of entertainment. Impactful stints with notable entertainment icons such as Gordons, Sunday Are (of Mo' Hits) and Elvina Ibru helped to hone his skills and prepare him fully. And when he was ready to go solo, he needed to further prodding.

In 2013, while handling a Gordons Live In Asaba event, Bob Kelly Ovie Williams met the super-talented singer, Humblesmith. After a series of disinterest due to previous disappointments from other musicians, Bob Kelly Ovie Williams finally gave the aspiring musician audience, and he was blown away. Not one to shy away from hard work, Bob Kelly Ovie Williams rolled up his sleeves and began to push the artiste with everything he could muster. Gradually, the efforts began to yield fruits and today, N-Tyze Entertainment is synonymous with Humblesmith, and they believe they are yet to scratch the surface.

He believes in giving maximum attention and efforts to an artiste - something he has been doing doggedly for Humblesmith for more than four years now. Being a perfectionists has its gains. Before the end of this year 2018, Bob Kelly Ovie Williams will open the doors for other artistes at N-Tyze Entertainment and still accord them the same fervour which landed Humblesmith a top spot in the entertainment industry.
